A. Program of excursions

1) Side :

Side was one of the most important harbor cities of Minor Asia during the Ancient, Roman and Hellenistic eras, it was always adorned with glorious architectural monuments by these civilizations. Where Side is located today was named as Pamphylia in the ancient times.

Today, the region hosts Antalya, Aksu, Ancient Sillyon, Aspendos and Alanya.

The Pamphylians founded admirable cities and left monumental architectural masterpieces to Side, Aspendos, and their capital city Perge. Thanks to archeological excavations, Side and other Pamphylian Ancient Cities have been presented to the cultural tourism and have been indicated as one of the cities that have the most invaluable archeological heritage of the world.

Recognized as the largest theatre of Ancient Pamphylia Region, Side Ancient Theatre is the only example with its plan and structure in Anatolia. In the 2nd century AD, it was constructed on colossal vaults and it had the perfect acoustic. As Side was built on a flat area, it was constructed like the Roman Empire Theatres and its upper seating area was heightened as the surface enabled and the lower parts lay on an arched foundation. Due to this, when compared to the ancient theatres leaning against a hill in Ancient Greek theatre architecture of Eastern Mediterranean, Side Theatre has less sloped. It was built for a seating capacity of 15.000 - 20.000 people. The 63-meter-long Stage Building rises behind the Orchestra on a spacious podium, most probably built as the same height as the Auditorium. Side Ancient Theatre was used as an open air basilica during 5th-6th centuries. Until the restorations in the area are completed, the reliefs of the Stage Building have been moved to the Agora.

The Agora behind the stage wall and Auditorium on the two-storey vaulted construction were leaning against the main avenue and this was enabling the citizens to enter the theatre easily and quickly. The horizontal aisle separating the lower and upper seating rows of Auditorium was called Diazoma in Ancient Greek. The Diazoma of Side Ancient Theatre has a width of 3.30 meters. 29 seating rows at the lower part of Diazoma and 22 at the upper part can still be enjoyed by the visitors today. The steps rise through Diazoma from the outer gallery of the lower part. From the interior galleries, the steps rise to the upper parts of the theatre.

2) Manavgat Waterfall on the Manavgat River is near the city of Side, 3 km (2 mi) north of Manavgat, Turkey. Its high flow over a wide area as it falls from a low height is best viewed from a high altitude. The white, foaming water of the Manavgat Waterfalls flows powerfully over the rocks. Near the waterfalls are shady tea gardens providing a pleasant resting place.
